

Professor Norbert Lossau

Goettingen State and University Library, Germany

Norbert Lossau is the Director of Göttingen State and University Library (SUB Göttingen), Germany, one of the five largest research libraries in Germany, founded in 1734. Since 2011 he is also Honorary Professor at the Humboldt-University Berlin/ School of Library and Information Science. Norbert Lossau moved to Göttingen from his post as Library Director and Chief Information Officer (CIO) Scholarly Information at Bielefeld University. In his previous position he has been the first Head of the Oxford Digital Library, University of Oxford, UK. Norbert Lossau is member of various national and international steering committees and advisory boards, among others the Main Committee for Research Libraries and the Sub-Committee for Information Management at the Deutsche Forschungsgemeinschaft (DFG), the Working Group “Digital Information in Research and Teaching” of the German Rectors Council (HRK), the Steering Group of the national “Committee Future of the Information Infrastructure” (GWK-KII), SPARC Europe Executive Board, the European Research Libraries (LIBER) Board, the new organisation COAR (Confederation of Open Access Repositories) Board Chairman, the Göttingen Centre for Digital Humanities (GCDH) Board. Currently he is the scientific coordinator of the European project OpenAIRE, implementing the Open Access pilot of the European Commission and has been one of the founders of the German national information platform on Open Access (www.open-access.net). His areas of activity include advanced digital services development, new paradigms in scientific publishing and communication, university-wide strategies for information/research infrastructures, eResearch/e-Humanities and international collaboration.